'DON'T TAKE AWAY OUR ALLOWANCES'

Carers plead with council over proposal to axe vital lifeline

By Russ Lawrence

russ.lawrence@nlhnews.co.uk

ANGRY carers fear an allowance designed to give them a break from looking after a vulnerable disabled relative or loved one could be taken away under a planned council shake-up.

Of the borough's 800 registered carers, those who receive respite allowance rely on it to take a holiday and have "some time for themselves" after the often exhausting daily routine of attending to the needs of others.

But a proposed overhaul of carers' support by Haringey Council could mean some of those currently receiving the discretionary payments – up to a maximum of £300 a year – may no longer qualify, or have their allowance reduced.

The council, which launched a month-long public consultation on its proposals last week, wants to outsource support to an external agency which would carry out assessments with more targeted forms of support replacing the respite allowance.

But losing or cutting payments to carers who currently receive them could have an adverse effect on their health, says Vida Black, chairman of Haringey Carers Forum.

Ms Black, who looks after her 22-year-old autistic son Claude, said being a carer could be physically and mentally demanding.

"My son wakes up all hours of the night all the time," she said. "Carers like myself use the payment to have some time away for ourselves to recharge our batteries and come back refreshed, otherwise I'm not sure how I would cope."

"Carers save the council and the health service significant sums of money and if those we care for were in residential care or supported living the expense would be enormous."

The council is writing to carers seeking their views on the proposals, which, it says, will help it comply with changes in the law under the Care Act.

Peter Morton, the council's cabinet member for health and well-being, said: "Carers do a hugely important job and we know that many of them find the current support system confusing and difficult to navigate. That's why we want to seek their views on proposals to make this process more straightforward and efficient."

"We also know that our statutory duties as a council have changed, with carers now entitled to an assessment, just like those who they care for. These proposals will help us to respond to these changes in the best possible way."

Car-jacker gets nine-year term for robbery plot

MASKED robbers who used car-jacked vehicles to ambush the drivers of vans delivering cigarettes to convenience stores and petrol stations were jailed last week, with a Tottenham man among the trio sentenced at Jailed: Jeffrey Galvin, 29 Dorking Court, Hampden Lane, was given nine years after pleading guilty to conspiracy to rob.

The masked robbers, the court heard, stole cigarettes worthy more than £80,000, using high-powered Audis or BMWs, which had been car-jacked and their number plates cloned.

Two of the victims of the car-jacks were women and one of them had her children with her when the vehicle was stolen.

Jailed with Galvin were Andrew Nolan, 35, of Potters Bar, Hertfordshire, and Gerard Galvin, 38, from Harwich, Essex.

Detective Inspector Tom Dhari, from Hounslow borough crime unit, who carried out the operation to catch the gang, in partnership with the Met Police and the Hertfordshire, Thames Valley and Surrey constabularies, said: "Although the group seldom used violence, their car-jackings and robberies were terrifying for all of their victims who were just going about their daily business."

"The group were highly organised and stole their cars to ensure a robbery could be carried out as efficiently as possible," he added

Rooftop celebration at £9m development

COUNCIL bigwigs and dignitaries, among them Tottenham MP David Lammy, donned hard hats as they celebrated the completion of a new £9million block of old folks' flats in a rooftop ceremony last week.

They laid the final brick to "top out" Lorenzo House, a five-storey mix of 44 one-bedroom and eight two-bedroom homes in Pretoria Road, Tottenham.

The development enables 100 residents with care needs to live independently supported by on-site specialist teams.

Built by Haringey Council and the One Housing housing association, it includes a medical and well-being centre, landscaped gardens, guest bedrooms for visitors and a stylish dining area.

Eight of the rooms are designed to provide care for people with dementia.

Alan Williams, One Housing's group director of development, said: "Each flat is specifically designed to give older people security and comfort."

"Our design standards mean each flat should cost an average of £5 per week to run for residents, which is important to many older people."

Don't put the brakes on...

Cycle campaigners' plea to mayor

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

THE war of words over Cycle Enfield has been ramped up after a 300-strong group of campaigners wrote an open letter to the Mayor of London condemning attempts to put the brakes on the plans.

The Enfield Cycling Campaign and the We Support Enfield Mini-Holland campaign group wrote the letter last week and attacked Enfield Southgate MP David Burrowes, as well as criticising the demands of the Save Our Green Lanes campaign.

Regarding the survey Mr Burrowes carried out last year, the campaigners stated in their letter: "Mr Burrowes's claim that 75 per cent of his constituents oppose the scheme is deliberately misleading."

"A survey of approximately 17,000 of his 65,000 constituents produced 1,973 responses saying "no" to the scheme. We make that 11.6 per cent of those surveyed, or a mere three per cent of all of his constituents, and definitely not the 75 per cent he claimed."

They also say that Mr Burrowes has appeared to work closely with the Save Our Green Lanes campaigners, who, they add, have been "misleading" members of the public over the content of the plans.

They say that this group has published posters which state that the cycle lanes will remove "most, if not all, parking" from town centres in Green Lanes. However, they write: "Cycle Enfield has stated in the consultation that most will remain."

The letter adds that the Save Our Green Lanes campaign has said it is "bound to cause the mass closure of local businesses", but the authors of the letter say that "there is no evidence anywhere in the world of cycle lanes hurting businesses and plenty to the contrary."

Asking the mayor to ignore Mr Burrowes's plea to halt the delivery of monies to the scheme, the authors write: "We aspire to a future for our borough where every child can safely walk or cycle to school, active travel is a convenient option for everyone and every residential street is safe for children to play on."

"We would like to live somewhere where fewer people need to own cars, the air is safe to breathe and high streets are attractive, people-friendly and therefore prosperous."

"Please confirm that no funds will be withheld and that you will continue to work with our council to progress the Mini-Holland/Cycle Enfield programme."

Responding to the attack on his campaigning, Mr Burrowes told the Advertiser: "From the outset I have been committed to ensuring that the voices of my constituents are heard in relation to Cycle Enfield. I am happy to be criticised for working hard to get the views of any of my constituents heard."

"I am not aligned to any campaign group, but do agree with campaigners that the overwhelming opposition from local businesses and many constituents is being ignored by the council."

Heist trio get set for sentences

THREE men from Enfield are due to be sentenced today (Wednesday) for their part in the Hatton Garden jewel heist.

Ringleaders Danny Jones, 59, of Park Avenue, Bush Hill Park, and Terry Perkins, 67, of Heene Avenue, admitted their part in the raid on the vaults of a safe deposit company over Easter last year during a trial at Woolwich Crown Court last month.

Hugh Doyle, 49, of Riverside Gardens, whom a jury convicted of concealing, converting or transferring stolen property, will also reappear at the same court for sentencing.

We have lift-off! Izem is the under-13 champion

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

A TEENAGE girl, who lifted her first dumbbell just over a year ago, is now a champion weightlifter.

Izem Hassan, 13, from Enfield Lock, who is a student of Oasis Academy, in Mollison Avenue, Enfield Lock, leapt at the chance last year when her aunt suggested that she should follow in her cousin's footsteps and give the sport a go.

"I wanted to try something new and it's something that most girls don't do, so it's a bit different," Izem told the Advertiser.

Since taking up the sport 16 months ago, she has been working hard at twice weekly training sessions at Lea Valley Athletics Centre, in Edmonton.

Those hours paid off when she lifted 30 kilograms in the jerk category of the British Weightlifting Age Group Championship in Castleford, West Yorkshire.

She also won the snatch competition with a lift of 27kg and is now the British under-13 champion.

Martin Emsley, the head of PE at Oasis Academy, told the Advertiser that the school was particularly proud of Izem because it has been a struggle to get teenage girls involved in sport.

And does Izem worry about her body changing as she gets stronger?

"No, I think it would be good because then I will look stronger and people will be scared of me," she said. "Already I can beat one boy in my year at arm wrestling. I think it's good for women to be strong."

She said that while she doesn't tell all her friends about her success "because it's just a sport", Izem revealed that her mum was thrilled when she started weight lifting.

"My mum is really happy that I've taken up a sport," she said.

Now, with one title already under her belt, Izem has her sights set on other competitions.

"My coach is talking about me competing more and I think he would like me to compete in the Olympics," she added.

Izem admits she loves the feeling of winning and is set to ramp up her involvement with all sport when she takes on her PE GCSE next year.

And after that? Maybe Tokyo in 2020 will be calling.

Schools' entrepreneurs

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

BRIGHT green wigs, tutus and rainbow logos came marching on stage singing a very catchy jingle – and then, to top it all, offered up a plate of healthy, homemade delights.

What more could a judge on a Dragons' Den-style competition ask for?

Groups of children from six schools in the Edmonton Schools Partnership pitched their snack products to four very intimidating (really?) dragons at the Millfield Theatre, in Silver Street, Edmonton, on Thursday morning last week.

Chef, restaurateur and Great British Bake Off star Urvashi Roe, Emma Rigby the managing director of web start-up Love Your Doorstep, Kika Charalambous, from the Edmonton Schools Partnership, and yours truly were regaled by tales of profit and loss, market research and endless hours of product development.

The vibrantly dressed team from Cuckoo Hall Primary Academy, in Cuckoo Hall Lane (decked out in matching tutus for added impact), presented the judges with their Funky Fruity Snack Stop snack bar, made from oats, honey and coconut.

Like the other teams, they had worked with experts from the north London-based Kinder Kitchen cookery school to develop their products in the course of a series of classes during which they learned many tips, including how honey can be used in recipes instead of sugar and that dates may be difficult to chop but once mixed up with some oats, honey and cocoa powder, they can taste magically of chocolate.

As well as picking up the skills needed to whizz up all natural fruit juices and mix together snack bars, the schoolchildren learned how to market and sell their snacks, first to their school friends and then in Edmonton Green shopping centre.

They even wowed judges with their quick-thinking sums when they were able to reel off their profit and loss margins in the blink of an eye.

The top prize of £100 went to Cuckoo Hall Primary Academy for their fun and relaxed pitch, which had all the judges eating out of the palm of their hands – but all the schools impressed with their ideas.

The runners-up from Wilbury Primary School, in Wilbury Way, branched out in their product design by giving judges small glasses of the Berry Blast they sold for £1.

Packed with pineapples, mangoes and raspberries, their ambition to spread as far afield as China and the USA revealed their entrepreneurial spirit with long-term plans including signing up a sports star as their spokesman/woman.

The Kinder Kitchen team are now working with a new set of six schools and gearing up for the next round of judging later in the year.

I am crossing my fingers that they will invite me back to guzzle – perhaps that should be sample – some more healthy treats.

Goldsmith raises doubts over proposals for cycling routes

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

MAYORAL candidate Zac Goldsmith has cast doubt on plans for Cycle Enfield, saying the proposals are too unpopular to be rolled out in full.

Speaking to the Advertiser on Tuesday after visiting small businesses in David Burrowes's Enfield Southgate constituency on Saturday, Mr Goldsmith said that in one of the other outer London boroughs to receive Mini-Holland funding – Kingston upon Thames – the plans were more popular with residents because of a better consultation process.

"We need to make more cycling provision," admitted the Tory candidate in May's Mayor of London election.

"The numbers are already big and they are going to double again. That's a good thing. We need to encourage that so we need more cycling schemes, but you can't do that without consent from the people at large."

He admitted he had not spoken to the council or cycling campaigners in Enfield about their views on the proposals – but insisted that meeting Mr Burrowes and his associates had not given him a one-sided view of the scheme.

"My understanding from businesses

'Better consultation': Zac Goldsmith, pictured with former Enfield North MP Nick de Bois on a visit to the borough last August and residents is that there are a huge number of complaints that need to be addressed," said Mr Goldsmith.

But with an issue as emotive as asking people to use their cars less, won't there always be objections to change, particularly in outer London boroughs, like Enfield?

"That's not the experience with the schemes in Richmond and Kingston," said the MP for Richmond Park. "People are really on board with the scheme there."

One of the big issues that will face the next mayor will be the rising tide of pollution currently choking London.

So, would Mr Goldsmith consider banning diesel vehicles, or expanding the congestion zone in a bid to bring down the numbers of cars, vans and lorries that are pumping diesel fumes into the air?

"If I were elected, by 2018 all new black cabs would be made to have zero emissions or be electric and I would introduce a retrofitting scheme for cabs bought before 2018 so that they would be able to run on liquefied petroleum gas," he said.

"But the congestion charge was never intended as a way of reducing pollution, it was designed for something different. There is a lot more we can do to cut pollution in London around reducing HGV journeys."

Mr Goldsmith is openly Eurosceptic and in favour of voting to leave the European Union.

At the moment, one of the ways in which air quality is monitored and controlled is through referencing European regulations around safe limits for pollution.

But if we came out of Europe, who would set and monitor London air pollution?

"We could regulate air pollution ourselves," he insisted.

He said that Londoners do face a risk on May 5 – "a risk about whether London moves forwards, or goes backwards."

Burrowes hits out at EU over refugee camps

THE only one of the borough's three MPs who is campaigning to leave the EU has said the European Union has caused "dysfunctional chaos" in the migrant camps in northern France.

David Burrowes, the Conservative MP for Enfield Southgate, visited the migrant and refugee camps in Calais and Dunkirk last week – and in the wake of his trip he was asked if coming out of Europe would just leave those struggling in the camps in an even worse position as there would no longer be cooperation between the British and the French on trying to find a solution to the crisis.

Mr Burrowes said that his trip had underlined the failings in the EU and insisted that the British government would be able to show "more compassion" to refugees if they were outside the union.

He added: "The EU has failed to provide sufficient aid and refuge."

"Now we are not in the Schengen border zone, but outside the EU we can have a clearer, distinct approach which provides more control of our borders and more compassion to refugees."

"Our agreement with France about border control in Calais is not dependent on our EU membership."

Switching places for a real eye-opener

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

AS a cyclist in London there are no words to describe the fear that creeps up from the pit of the stomach when the distinct throttle of a tipper truck, skip lorry or delivery truck hurtles closer to your right shoulder.

At junctions I treat HGVs as if they are giant deadly purring beasts, primed to turn left across me, sucking my bike under wheels that are as tall as me.

And now, after my first experience sitting in the eye of the beast – in the cab of a lorry – I realise my terror is actually the only thing keeping me from being flattened.

Sitting in the driver's seat of an HGV and looking in every mirror, I cannot see the policeman standing with his bike directly beside the left-hand door of the cab.

I see him briefly when he starts cycling from the left rear wheel, but in a matter of milliseconds, by the time I have checked my other mirrors, he has disappeared.

He stands at various points around the lorry. The only time I can see him clearly is when he stands at the very top edge of the mocked-up advance stop cycle box.

If he was even standing towards the back of that box, I would have no idea he was there and would drive off over him.

PC Gavin Stubbington is with me in the cab, making sure there's no way I accidentally run over one of his colleagues.

The switching places exercise is designed to show cyclists how easily they can become caught in an HGV driver's blind spot.

"Last year nine cyclists died in London," he tells me. "They all died at junctions where HGVs turned left across them."

In London, it can be misleading for cyclists because as the road leads towards a junction there is often a painted cycle lane, or a picture of a cyclist on the far left of the road, on the inside blind spot of lorries, leading up to the advance stop box for cyclists.

PC Stubbington admits the painted lines on the road can be misleading.

"Never cycle on the left inside side of an HGV because even if they aren't indicating, they might turn left and they cannot see you," he warns.

"For me, on my bike, I stay back behind the lorry and if I need to get across the junction, walk my bike on to the pavement and cross the road at the pedestrian lights."

He added that the crucial thing for cyclists in front of HGVs at junctions is to look up and wave at the driver to make sure they can see them.

"They are trained to wave back or acknowledge that they've seen you – so you can be confident that you're not in the blind spot," he explains.

Benefit triumph clears way for return of Cathy's car

BUREAUCRATS have decided that a car can be returned to a severely disabled woman – weeks after it was taken away because of cuts to her disability benefits.

Enfield resident Cathy Walsh has the neurological condition severe generalised dystonia, which causes uncontrolled spasms, and said the car was a lifeline which gave her independence.

The 48-year-old, who was born with the condition, has had been on disability living allowance for 23 years.

She was reassessed for the government's new personal independence payment and was told just before Christmas she did not meet the criteria for the advanced rate mobility payment, which covers the cost of an automatic car under the Motability scheme.

However, her consultant, Professor Thomas Warner from University College Hospital London, who has been treating her for 20 years, said he had no idea how an assessor concluded that Mrs Walsh could walk between 50 and 200 metres.

He said: "It is clearly incorrect. At best she can walk up to 20 metres and on a bad day significantly less."

Mrs Walsh, who lives in The Ridgeway, said: "They did not even ask me to walk outside."

Her case was also taken up by Enfield North MP Joan Ryan, who mentioned it during a debate at Westminster Hall last month.

The Department for Work and Pensions has now reversed its decision – three weeks after Mrs Walsh had returned the car.

She said she had been told she may not get another car until April, adding: "I just want to get myself back to the way I used to be."

Mrs Walsh said the stress caused by the initial assessment had affected her health.

A DWP spokeswoman said: "We encourage claimants to send us information about their condition ahead of assessment so that we can make the correct decision. As we've made clear previously, Mrs Walsh submitted further medical evidence which means she is now eligible for the benefit and a Motability car."

Honoured: Frederick Webb receives the Ushakov Medal from Commander Igor Elkin, inset, top. As a young man, inset, bottom, he was assigned to the hazardous Arctic convoys taking vital supplies to Russia during World War II, main picture

Convoy veteran's Russian accolade

By Julia Gregory

julia.gregory@nlhnews.co.uk

A SERVICEMAN who braved Arctic waters to deliver vital wartime aid to Russia has been honoured with a prestigious medal.

Frederick Webb was sent to a training school in Earls Court, in west London, to learn communication skills including Morse code before joining the crew of the destroyer HMS Skate on the hazardous convoys, enduring freezing temperatures amid the constant risk of attack by German U-boats during World War II.

The vessel was built in 1917 and brought U-boats into harbour in Harwich during World War I.

Mr Webb, 92, of Bycullah Road, Enfield, was honoured with the Ushakov Medal by the Russian government in recognition of his bravery at a ceremony at the Mayor's Parlour in Enfield Civic Centre last week.

Assistant Russian Naval Attache Commander Igor Elkin said: "The Ushakov medal is the most respected medal in the Russian navy. The Russian convoy was a very big help for Russians."

Mr Webb served as a Royal Navy telephonist and helped entertain troops by playing records they requested to while away their down time.

He said: "It was very hazardous. We used to assemble at Loch Ewe and head up to the Arctic Circle, which took us seven days. There were U-boats up there looking for us."

However, he never came under attack.

He said that when the ship was part of a convoy it had to maintain transmission silence.

"You never transmitted (messages) unless it was vital," he explained. "If you transmitted, you had the fear of being picked up by the enemy."

More than 3,000 servicemen died on the Russian convoys between 1941 and 1945 as German submarines and aircraft tracked them down.

In 1944, Mr Webb transferred to duties sweeping the English Channel of mines in advance of the Normandy landings.

He said: "I was there during D-Day, you had to be prepared for anything to happen."

After the war Mr Webb joined the Metropolitan Police, initially at Hornsey, where he used his Morse code skills communicating via police cars.

In 1958, he transferred to the Thames division support unit at Waterloo Bridge.

Some of the world's leading film stars visited for a trip on the Thames and Mr Webb met Grace Kelly (who was by then Princess Grace of Monaco), John Wayne and Telly Savalas.

He retired in 1971 and worked in Enfield Council's highways department, where he ensured that road signs were correct.

Car clue in hunt for burglars

POLICE are appealing for help after two burglaries within the space of an hour in broad daylight.

Both break-ins took place in streets less than a mile apart between 1.50pm and 2.20pm on Friday (March 4).

The first was in Canonbury Road, Enfield, and the second was a short time later in nearby Bicknoller Road.

In both burglaries, the suspects are believed to have used a blue Audi Q5 car, which was parked at the Baker Street end of Canonbury Road.

This vehicle, which police believe had fake number plates, the first two letters of which were KU, was last seen making off along High Street, Southgate, later in the afternoon.

Police want to trace four men in connection with the burglaries.

All four are of white Mediterranean appearance. Three of them are described as being in their late teens or early 20s and one is believed to be about 30 years old.

One of the men is described as taller than the others and of slim build. Detective Constable Ryan Clark, of Enfield police, said: "I would like to both appeal for witnesses and warn local residents."

"If anyone saw this car parked, or after it had made off from the scene, I would ask them to contact police. A number of people may have walked by this car or seen the men getting into it. Your information could be vital."

"I would also ask residents to look out for this car, and the men driving it. For an immediate sighting, call 999."

Everitt

Artistic director,

I BECAME a fan of The Three Degrees when I caught a live concert of theirs on the television when I was a young teenager.

I'd never heard of the Sound of Philadelphia with its background of big band-jazz-soul fusion topped with tight close harmonies – and I just loved it.

The line-up then was Sheila Ferguson, Fayette Pinkney and Valerie Holiday, dressed head-to-toe in sequins, looking and sounding a million dollars.

The next day I rushed out to the record store and bought my first ever album, The Three Degrees 20 Greatest Hits, and played it over and over again.

When I heard last year that they were planning a new album and a new UK tour, I was ecstatic – and when their agent called to say that they would like to play Millfield, I was beside myself.

So on Friday, April 1, The Three Degrees arrive in Edmonton and will create that amazing magical sound that has been delighting audiences since the 1960s.

Edmonton is, of course, the home town of Chas & Dave and they also return to Millfield in May in a star-studded season that includes Strictly's Pasha Kovolev, Rick Wakeman, Omid Djalili, Bobby Davro, Janet Kay and Des O'Connor.

But it will be The Three Degrees who will take me back to the time that I fell in love with the Sound of Philadelphia and those tight, three-part harmonies.

To me, it's the pure sound of joy. I hope you can come, too.

Shelter visit shows MP's commitment to homeless

ALL too often we read about an MP going back on their word or another expenses scandal.

As the community relations manager at a local domiciliary care agency, Home Care Preferred, I am delighted to report a refreshing, alternative story about David Burrowes' contribution and commitment to the local area and its residents.

On February 17, Home Care Preferred provided a hot meal for St Andrew's Church Winter Night Shelter for the homeless, run by the charity All People All Places.

Upon arrival we were shocked to see Mr Burrowes, the MP for Enfield Southgate, among those in attendance.

At first glance I assumed he was there for a token "do-gooder" shot for the press and would then be on his way. It soon became apparent that he was, in fact, settled in for the evening to sample some of the culinary delights we were offering up.

Sitting down to enjoy dinner and some socialising, it was clear listening to the MP's conversations with those who were on the charity's programme that he had grown to know them rather well. In due course it came to pass that he had been visiting each respective night shelter, which changes from night to night, and had developed a real friendship and interest in the attendees' well-being.

Mr Burrowes has highlighted the borough's on-going homeless problem before, sleeping outdoors in order to raise awareness of the treacherous conditions those without a home have to endure. His compassion for the cause shone through during the meal we shared as he explored ways in which homeless individuals could improve their situation and how he could help.

This commitment to bettering the circumstances of the vulnerable and often over-looked was reiterated when he spoke animatedly about his jobs fair, which focuses on helping those with disabilities find employment and on helping business understand how to unlock the potential of disabled employees.

In an age where being affiliated with the government can sadly be no good thing, the work Mr Burrowes is doing in the community and his obvious care for the residents of Enfield gives me renewed hope in MPs and those in parliament, at least some of them anyway.

How hard did they look for a green belt site?

I READ with interest the letter from Ian D'Souza of Enfield RoadWatch ("There is just no need for a school in this location", February 17), concerning the tactics being employed by the Wren Academy to manipulate the Local Plan consultation in favour of developing on the green belt.

I have seen the communication sent by Wren Academy to its supporters, one of whom described the approach as unethical.

Reference is also made in the letter that it is difficult finding new sites to build a school upon as there are especially in residential areas "no old industrial sites available".

This is highly misleading. A site does not need to be old industrial site to be classified as brownfield. It only needs to have been previously built upon.

This leads nicely on to the possible use of St Anne's Catholic High School for Girls, in London Road, Enfield, which is due to be vacated. This location would suit a new school due to its proximity to transport links and the possible areas a new school needs to serve.

It will be classed as brownfield and any policies both from central government and local authorities state that unless there are exceptional circumstances brownfield land should be fully explored first.

Wren Academy suggests that this site has been discounted as too small. How much exploration as to the feasibility of this site has really been undertaken? Or is it the case it's far easier and cost effective to develop on the green belt?

In addition, the original proposal suggested by Wren and Fairview was for the whole piece of land in Enfield Road to be developed with a school and 300-plus homes, which has been vehemently opposed by Enfield RoadWatch.

Despite the provision for homes being taken out of the equation, and a much smaller acreage needed, Wren is still pursuing the release of this land for the building of a school. What comes next, the housing?

I believe this was what can only be described as a cynical move to orchestrate what is ostensibly a highly opportunistic action to allow the London Diocese to offload with Fairview and the Wren Academy's assistance, land they no longer want at a possible huge profit. Are their coffers that empty?

Wren's actions will impact not only on the Enfield Road site, but all green-belt in the borough.

I therefore ask how does all this sit with Wren's own visions and values to "have a keen understanding of moral issues and recognise the difference between right and wrong and to be environmentally aware and knowledgeable global citizens"?

I urge all of their supporters to think hard about what is acceptable? Has the London Diocesan Board for Schools indeed overstepped the mark?

Chaos at A&E underlines the struggle North Mid is facing

THE recent chaos at North Middlesex University Hospital has not gone away. My fiancée has been to A&E twice recently.

First he went for a suspected DVT. After several hours in casualty, he was sent home and told to come back next day. We did so for ambulatory care and it was chaos, with too many people and not enough chairs. We were there from 9.30 right up to 6pm.

Luckily, my fiancée got the scan, which showed he did not have a DVT, and was sent home with more pills.

But a week later he returned to A&E by ambulance with problems regarding his gall bladder. Again there were many people in casualty although luckily we did not have to wait too long.

However, there were no cubicles available so he was seen in the plaster room. Hours later he was told they were sending him home again with more pills.

I decided to go to the GP to hand in a form and said he was in agony. Fortunately, the GP managed to get him back to the North Mid, but we were told to go to the Surgical Assessment Unit.

My fiancée waited in a chair, being of partial sight. He sat there for several hours before he was finally admitted to a ward because I said that I did not want him home until the problem had been sorted out.

I have written many times to you about how Chase Farm's A&E unit should not have been closed.

What should happen in A&E is that there should be more cubicles, an ultrasound machine and an echo machine for heart scans, for a start.

He was not the only patient who had to wait a long time. Perhaps a walk-in centre would do at North Middlesex like they used to have, or reopen Chase Farm's A&E unit as it should have never closed.

A worthy winner

Enfield Women's Centre bags £1,000 windfall

THERE were a thousand reasons for a cash-strapped Enfield charity to celebrate this week after it won the £1,000 up for grabs in the competition the Advertiser has been running in conjunction with mobile phone provider Vodafone.

There was astonishment and delight at Enfield Women's Centre, which provides counselling and support for women going through difficult times, after staff there learned that the windfall would be coming their way.

And they already know what their winnings will be spent on – brightening up the counselling room, at the centre, in Derby Road, Ponders End, by replacing the old furniture and décor with new curtains, carpets, a coffee table and comfortable seats.

It was a tough task for our judges to select which community project from the many nominated by our readers deserved the £1,000 being offered by Enfield's branch of Vodafone in its Community Connection Awards.

But after much deliberation the centre just had the edge.

A cheque for the money was presented to chairwoman of the centre Barbara Le Fevre by Vodafone branch manager Mohammed Uddin on Tuesday.

The centre's director Ginnie Landon said: "We're grateful to Vodafone and the Advertiser for their support.

"We will use the money to smarten up our counselling room and have already been looking on websites and chosen the colour scheme."

The centre has been running a counselling service since 1995. Counsellors are able to speak some of the major languages used by people in the community in Enfield and offer support in Turkish, Polish and French.

The centre also runs courses providing people with help in building their confidence, dealing with anger and handling stress.

"It's about making the voice of women heard," added Ms Landon.

Advertiser publisher Alison Cruse said: "We're delighted to support charities which are

And the winner is: Enfield Women's Centre's chairwoman Barbara Le Fevre with Mohammed Uddin, manager of Vodafone's store in Enfield Town doing such great work in the community."

Mohammed Uddin, Vodafone store manager in Enfield, said "Enfield Women's Centre couldn't be a more worthy and deserving winner. Their work truly makes a difference to the people in our community.

'Superman' John gearing up for marathon number 295

By Julia Gregory

julia.gregory@nlhnews.co.uk

ENFIELD'S own "Superman" is in training for his 295th marathon which he will complete on the iconic route through the streets of London as he hopes to clock up 300 by his 60th birthday next year.

John Wallace, who runs marathons in the costume of the comic book superhero, competed in his first London race in 1986 after a friend bet him £5 that he could not complete the 26.2-mile route – and he has never looked back with a stash of medals to prove it.

Since then he has clocked up 7,702.8 miles on 294 marathon routes around the world and hundreds more on training runs, raising more than £58,700 for charities.

He has run in New York, Boston, Amsterdam, Stockholm, Paris and Athens and says one of his highlights was competing in the Everest marathon around the base camp of the world's highest mountain in 1993.

"Everest was the most memorable," said John. "I will never see Everest again. We spent eight weeks up there acclimatising."

Despite the altitude, he completed the route while enjoying breathtaking scenery in eight hours, 56 minutes and 28 seconds.

John, a school caretaker, who has worn out dozens of running trainers over the years, added: "When I did 43 marathons in one year, I got through six pairs of trainers. I've also got through six Superman costumes over the years."

Mr Wallace, of Connaught Avenue, is hoping to raise £2,000 for the North London Hospice to provide care for terminally ill people in Enfield, Barnet and Haringey.

He said: "I turned 59 this year. London will be my 295th marathon and I have raised £58,700 for different charities including Cancer Research and Asthma Research."

His wife Marion also ran the London Marathon in 1986.

John trains throughout the year and heads to Hampstead Heath for regular four-mile runs.

He is a member of the 100 Marathon Club and says that he loves clocking up the miles as well as enjoying the reaction of the crowds as he passes in his distinctive outfit.

He used to run with Edmonton Running Club.

As an experienced marathon man, he offered top tips for first-time runners getting ready for this year's challenge in London, which is taking place on Sunday, April 24.

"Listen to your body, stay hydrated and enjoy the occasion," he said.

NEWS

Shut out: Protesters Sam Elborn, Maria Turner, Ian D'Souza, Yvonne Griffin, Charles Aghadiuno and Madeleine Betton make their point during a protest last September

Access is denied

RESIDENTS campaigning to save a swathe of green land in the midst of a heavily residential area have hit out at property developers who have blocked their access to the land.

After successfully seeing off an application from Fairview New Homes to build housing and a new school on the patch of land to the south of Enfield Road – between Cotswold Way and Lowther Drive – the Enfield RoadWatch group has hit out at the decision by property developers to bar the campaigners from carrying out their own, independent biodiversity studies.

The developers are managing the green space on behalf of the London Diocesan Fund, which owns the land.

Campaigners submitted an application to the developers to gain access to the land so they could commission their own ecological surveys to build an authoritative picture of the flora and fauna that currently flourish on the site.

However, last week they were told their application for access had been denied.

Ian D'Souza, the chairman of Enfield RoadWatch, said: "Our wish to carry out ecological, wildlife and biodiversity studies has been based on the unprecedented response from the community to save this particular piece of green belt land. We have had more than 5,000 signatures to our change.org petition so far.

"We felt that by carrying out our own totally independent studies we would get a clear unbiased report on the rich ecological value of this land.

"This would not only inform concerned residents and the community as a whole, but would help with data towards Enfield's bio diversity action plan due to be reviewed this year."

Fairview Homes were approached for a comment, but none had been received by the time the Advertiser went to press.

Doctors in the house

By Russ Lawrence

russ.lawrence@nlhnews.co.uk

SPREADING the feel-good factor at Edmonton's Millfield Theatre on Saturday will be legendary British rhythm and blues band Dr Feelgood.

And appearing with them as support act at the Silver Street venue will be veteran rock 'n' rollers Eddie and the Hot Rods.

Regarded as one of the world's most exciting live R&B bands, Dr Feelgood gained a cult status on the pub rock circuit in the mid-1970s, partly due to the stage presence of celebrated former guitarist Wilko Johnson.

His distinctive choppy-style of playing and trademark manic walk, combined with the brilliant harmonica playing and songwriting of now-deceased vocalist Lee Brilleux, forged the band's reputation, giving them a string of hit singles.

The Canvey Island-based band are exemplified by their driving, raw uncompromising sound, combined with an electrifying performance.

And for four decades they've continued to entertain music fans in their inimitable style, albeit it with changed line-ups.

The current band, who have toured extensively, will be performing, all their hits including Roxette, Back in the Night, Milk and Alcohol, Down at the Doctors, She Does it Right, Going Back Home and See You Later Alligator.

Fellow Canvey Islanders Eddie and the Hot Rods, best remembered for 1977 hit Do Anything You Want To Do, provide just the high-octane rock 'n' roll-with-attitude warm-up act needed to get the joint jumping.

Slow-burning tale of witchcraft

THE WITCH (15, 93 mins)

SUSPICION is like a malignant tumour. Addressed quickly, it can be excised with clinical precision by common sense and logical reasoning, leaving behind emotional scars that will heal over time. Left untreated, the suspicion swells and steadily infects clear rational thought, poisoning loved ones against each other.

Set in 17th-century New England, The Witch is a slow-burning thriller about a fervently religious family torn asunder by the belief that their teenage daughter is in league with the Devil.

Writer-director Robert Eggers delivers a stylish and ambitious debut of remarkable clarity and emotional power that burrows under our skin and leaves us scratching helplessly in the dark, at the mercy of his dark and unsettling parable.

He steadfastly avoids the jump shocks and scares that have become emblematic of the modern horror genre.

The eponymous hag doesn't materialise unexpectedly out of the darkness, accompanied by a burst of staccato strings. Characters don't abandon their senses and stumble blindly to their doom.

Instead, Eggers cranks up suspense until we are whimpering for mercy, underscoring our discomfort with a chilling orchestral score composed by Mark Korven.

William (Ralph Ineson) stands accused of "prideful conceit" before other members of his Puritan Christian community.

Unbowed and unmoved, he is excommunicated with his wife Katherine (Kate Dickie), eldest daughter Thomasin (Anya Taylor-Joy), son Caleb (Harvey Scrimshaw) and the twins Mercy (Ellie Grainger) and Jonas (Lucas Dawson).

Accused: Anya Taylor-Joy as Thomasin

The family travels by rickety cart to a clearing, establishes a new homestead and plants crops in time for the birth of a son, Samuel.

A witch (Bathsheba Garnett), who lives in the nearby forest, steals the baby during a game of peekaboo with Thomasin and uses the child's freshly spilt blood to restore her youthful lustre.

Katherine is devastated and William struggles to hold together his family as grief and guilt corrupt their love.

"We will conquer this wilderness," he growls. "It will not consume us," Poor Katherine's faith wavers – "since Sam disappeared, I cannot see Christ's help as near" – and the conspiratorial twins accuse Thomasin of witchcraft, based on whispered conversations with the family's prized goat.

Matters come to a head when Caleb secretly ventures into the forest, gun in hand, and stumbles upon a moss-thatched cottage...

The Witch begins as a coming-of-age story, focusing on Thomasin's awkward transition to adulthood.

Once Samuel vanishes, nerves jangle and Eggers confidently unpicks the seams of the family's existence, eliciting a spell-binding lead performance from Taylor-Joy as the virginal teen, whose sexual awakening doesn't go unnoticed by her hormone-addled brother.

The script evokes the period in both dialogue and design and cinematographer Jarin Blaschke uses lighting to stunning effect to suggest unspeakable horrors lurking just out of our field of vision.

As much as we want to look away, we're riveted to the spot.

Did you know that Barnfields are Enfield's only representative agents of the
GUILD OF PROFESSIONAL ESTATE AGENTS

Why choose a Guild Member?

THE GUILD OF PROFESSIONAL ESTATE AGENTS is a national network in excess of 780 independent estate agents, delivering, local, regional and national property exposure. As such, each member is able to assist in the promotion of your property through syndicated websites, publications and exhibitions provided by The Guild. Furthermore, agents are able to refer your details to fellow members to help you in the search for your next home.

The Guild exclusively appoints one member per town which means all members are eager to work together to assist you in connecting your moving process. This national network encompasses fellow independent estate agents and like-minded individuals who all adhere to the same code of conduct so you can rest assured your property is in safe hands.

You could achieve a far better result selling your home through a Guild Member Buying and selling your home can feel like an unmanageable task. With the average person moving home only eight times in a lifetime, it is no surprise that people can find themselves out of practice with the selling process. Using the right estate agent is an effective way of taking most of the stress out of your move. From accurate valuations to timely viewings, from professional marketing to securing the deal and arranging a removal service – an expert agent will be able to support you through the entire process of selling your home.

Selecting the right estate agent to assist with your purchase or sale is extremely important. You need an estate agent that will not only get you the best price but will guide you seamlessly and carefully through the entire process.

Paying a high price for quality

By Matt Kimberley

THE Bentley Bentayga – pronounced with a capital A sound in the middle – is the newest, fastest and most luxurious SUV you can buy. It's packed with exquisite detailing that lifts it above the rest of the SUV crowd, plus technology that helps it drive shockingly well.

It's more than 5.1 metres long and two metres wide, even excluding the mirrors, and weighs 2.5 tonnes with a driver on board. Under the bonnet is an all-new, six-litre, W12 engine that shares not a single nut, bolt or screw with its predecessor. Two banks of six cylinders diagonally interlaced provide 600bhp and a creamy 664lb/ft of torque courtesy of two twin-scroll turbochargers.

Here's the divisive bit. The back is a little bland and could belong to a few other brands, if you squint, but small tweaks to the front since the concept stage have improved it no end. It's colour-sensitive, however, and you'll want to pitch for one of the beautiful reds, greens or blues. Bentayga Brown is a choice you might come to regret. Either way, the lustrous paint finishes are utterly gorgeous.

There are no image worries here. It's a Bentley in every way, true to what the modern brand stands for and true to the direction the company's founder W.O. Bentley would have wanted for it. If you like the idea of a luxury SUV, there's nothing more appealing in the world.

A big boot and useful cabin storage combine to make good on the Bentayga's promise of space. The boot lip is high, but you can customise it with a practical, fold-down ledge for sitting on. Beyond that is a capacious boot, three back seats with loads of legroom and the back half of four-zone climate control. Just be careful with the beautifully soft leather.

The 12 cylinders deliver near-instant, crushing, relentless torque that's seamlessly delivered to the road via four independently electrically-controlled wheels of up to 22 inches across. It's breathtakingly quick. You can't completely escape 2.5 tonnes, but the Bentayga stays implausibly flat through corners thanks to a 48-volt electrical system that tweaks the ever-plush suspension while you drive.

Carrying indecent speed through corners without body roll is the big Bentley's party piece, but the rest of the package is sublime. The multi-way adjustable seats are all-day comfy, the driving position is perfect behind the slightly-too-chunky steering wheel and the obviously Volkswagen Group-sourced satnav interface is a dream to use. There's even a good sense of feel and feedback at the wheel.

For a starting price more than double that of the Range Rover, it depends how much you want that exclusivity, that badge and the mind-boggling attention to detail on offer here. But £1,400 to have a craftsman pick up a different colour of thread with which to stitch the dashboard does seem a bit unreasonable – and that's just one of up to £70,000 worth of options on the press launch cars. Price issues aside, nothing can touch its combination of qualities and a Range Rover seems a bit budget by comparison.

SUVs are so popular the world over that when you think about it, it's surprising it's taken car makers like Bentley so long to build a hyper-luxury one. The company has already raised its target of 3,600 units a year to reach adequate profitability – they'll easily shift all 5,000 they can build every 12 months. People with the means will buy the Bentayga simply because it's the best.

PA Choices

Personal Assistant Service

The Barnet Group is developing a Personal Assistant Service, PA Choices, which aims to match people who are in receipt of direct payments with personal assistants who are able to support them on a day to day basis.

What is a personal assistant (PA)?

A personal assistant is someone who is employed to provide support to an individual who has a social care need enabling that person to live in their own home, independently, for longer.

A personal assistant will carry out tasks required by the person employing them: from supporting the person to get up, washed and dressed, to carrying out every day domestic tasks, or supporting the person to get out and about.

Are you interested in becoming a PA?

The key skills needed to be a PA are the ability to listen, to be flexible and a willingness to learn and respond.

The job can be very flexible, offering part-time and full time work on different days and at different times. Some people become a personal assistant with flexible hours whilst also working in an entirely different job.

The role is suitable for people from all walks of life, from someone in college who may only want to work evenings or weekends, to someone who is retired and may only want to work a few hours a week.

BLOW TO SPURS' TITLE AMBITIONS

By Dominique Stafford

sport.enfield@nlhnews.co.uk

HARRY KANE expressed his frustration after Tottenham Hotspur were held to a 2-2 draw at home by ten-man Arsenal on Saturday to lose further ground in the race for the Premier League title.

Spurs had missed the opportunity to go top of the table when they were beaten at West Ham United on Wednesday last week, and this draw – coupled with Leicester's 1-0 victory over Watford – saw them slip five points behind the shock leaders with nine matches remaining.

And striker Kane is well aware that Tottenham squandered the opportunity to put more pressure on Leicester by failing to take maximum points in a hugely entertaining north London derby.

Having fallen behind to an Aaron Ramsey goal late in the first half, Spurs were handed a numerical advantage early in the second period when Francis Coquelin was dismissed and looked to be making the most of their extra man as Toby Alderweireld and Kane struck in quick succession to put them ahead.

However, they were unable to hold on for the win as Alexis Sanchez grabbed a point for the visitors to deal a big setback to Tottenham's title bid.

"We're very disappointed," said Kane. "We had them where we wanted them. We were 2-1 up against ten men and we had to finish the game off."

"We needed to score the third or fourth and if we had it would have been a very different changing room after the game. That's football and we have to deal with it."

"We came out in the second half and we pushed on more and more when they went down to ten men. Even after we went 2-1 up we had a couple of chances we could have put away, but we didn't and when you are playing against top teams they can punish you at any moment – and that's what happened."

Kane added: "We're disappointed, but we have to move on. We played well again and there is a long way to go, not just in the Premier League, but we've got another important game in the Europa League against Borussia Dortmund coming up this week. We'll stay positive and keep doing what we're doing."

"It will be an amazing atmosphere in Dortmund and it's one the lads are all looking forward to. It will be two very good teams going at it, we both play a good style of football and it will be a very good game."

And head coach Mauricio Pochettino was also left frustrated that Spurs had failed to secure maximum points from the match.

"The feeling at the end was not so good, but we have to be proud of our players," he said. "The effort was fantastic, and it has been from the beginning of the season."

"When we scored the second goal we were in a good position but it is Arsenal in front of us, they have some good players and you can concede."

"You feel a little disappointed because in the last few minutes we wanted to score again yet we knew we could concede some chances."

"It's always difficult to play against ten men as well. Now we need to keep working hard. We're in a good position and we've kept the distance to Arsenal."

A frustrating day: Harry Kane was left annoyed after Tottenham let a lead slip against Arsenal on Saturday

Skolars beaten in opening league match

A RESOLUTE display from the London Skolars could not prevent them from being beaten 28-12 at York City Knights in their opening match in rugby league's Kingstone Press Championship One on Sunday.

The Skolars had been looking to bounce back from their humiliating defeat at the hands of amateur outfit Pilkington Recs in the Challenge Cup the previous week, and although they again ended up losing this encounter, Jermaine Coleman's men did at least produce a much-improved performance.

However, it was York who enjoyed much the better of the early exchanges and they opened the scoring when Kriss Brining powered his way through two tackles to touch down.

Rather than let their heads drop at this, the Skolars responded well to falling behind and were dominant for the next 20 minutes – being camped deep in the hosts' half for long spells without being able to force their way over the line.

Having soaked up a considerable amount of pressure, York went on to extend their advantage prior to the interval as Jonny Presley and Brad Hey combined to present James Morland with the opportunity to score in the corner.

The Skolars fell further behind early in the second half when Ed

Smith pounced on a handling error and released Morland, who raced down the wing to score.

A Brett Turner try made it 20-0 to York, but the visitors finally got some reward for their efforts when Erjon Dollapi held off several challenges to touch down.

Further tries from Hey and Mark Applegarth put the hosts in complete control, and the Skolars were then reduced to 12 men as Will Lovell was sent off for dissent.

But it was the depleted visitors who had the final say as Alex Anthony grabbed a consolation score as time expired. Charlie Lawrence converted both their tries.

The London Skolars entertain Oxford on Saturday.

Borough suffer disappointing defeat

HARINGEY BOROUGH endured a disappointing day on Saturday as they were beaten 3-2 at home by Witham Town in Ryman League Division One North.

The continued problems with the pitch at Coles Park led to Borough switching the match to Tilbury's Chadfields ground for a fourth successive home game, and they made a slow start as Witham dominated the opening exchanges – deservedly taking the lead on 12 minutes when Tyler Hayes turned in the box before unleashing a fierce shot that flew into the net.

Borough, who had only lost one of their previous eight matches in the league, then fell further behind on 34 minutes as Nathan Korenteng timed his run to perfection and beat the offside trap before calmly slotting past advancing keeper Mikheil Kharshiladze.

But the hosts suddenly came to life after conceding the second goal and gave themselves renewed hope as Rakim Richards reduced their deficit almost immediately.

Only two fantastic saves from Witham keeper Lewis Down prevented the hosts from scoring again prior to the interval, and Borough continued to pile on the pressure in the second half.

However, the equaliser would not come and the visitors struck again on the break with 18 minutes remaining – Scott Kemp poking the ball over the line after an initial shot had been parried by Kharshiladze.

Borough refused to lie down and Adam Scotcher pulled one back with time running out, but it was too little too late as Witham held on for a win which saw them close to within two points of their hosts in the table.

Haringey Borough face home games against Thurrock on Saturday (3pm) and Brightlingsea Regent on Tuesday (7.45pm). Both matches are currently scheduled to take place at Coles Park.
